MARCELO A. BLANCO | CHIEF OF POLICE

Community Premise Information Form

Keeping your contact information on file with the police department can be highly beneficial in several ways. For example, if a report is received from a neighbor regarding a suspicious person seen on your property, a dispatcher can quickly contact you to advise of a potential threat, and confirm if the person has permission to be at your residence. Other examples include notifications such as a water leak, a garage door left open, or a need to evacuate.

Many times, the Police Department will receive information on a found special needs individual, such as an Autistic child or elderly person with Dementia who may be unable to tell us where they live. The Police Department would like to return them to their families as quickly as possible, and having your information on file enables us to do that.
